We also support Georgia's new peace initiative called "A step to a Better Future". We call upon Russia to implement the Six Point Agreement of 12 August 2008 to withdraw its military forces from the territory of Georgia in order to allow reconciliation and a peaceful resolution of conflicts".

Minister of Foreign Affairs of Estonia Sven Mikser<sup>2</sup>

August 7, 2018

We welcome the Georgian Government's commitment to seeking dialogue. The peace initiative by the Georgian Government "A Step to a Better Future" looks for opportunities to improve the living standards of people on both sides of the Administrative Boundary Line. This type of inclusive approach is also supported by the European Union.

European Council
Council of the European Union

The EU welcomes the package of proposals "A Step to a Better Future" of the Georgian government that can benefit the citizens living on both sides of the Administrative Boundary Lines by facilitating trade, education and mobility. Such proposals are in line with the European Union's policy of engagement with the breakaway regions of Georgia.

Jacek Czaputowicz, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Poland, joint news conference with Lithuanian, Latvian and Georgian Foreign Ministers and Vice Prime Minister of Ukraine:<sup>4</sup>

“We call on Russia to withdraw the recognition of so-called independence of Georgia’s occupied regions, to fully comply with the August 12, 2008 Ceasefire Agreement and to withdraw its troops from these territories. We are also concerned over the deterioration of human rights and security situation in occupied territories. I welcome the initiative of the Government of Georgia, "Step for a Better Future", which is a clear signal for residents of Abkhazia and Tskhinvali region”.

Georgian occupied territories - ten years after the Russian invasion: extracts from the debate:

- Federica Mogherini, High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy / Vice-President of the EC: “The European Union has been the central actor in the process to manage the consequences of the conflict, to improve the lives of all the people in the region and to find a lasting solution. We have, as European Union, a very special role to play, particularly because of our European Union monitoring mission to Georgia. Today we are the only international monitoring presence in the field.

Our approach is to include the breakaway regions in our programs in Georgia, whenever this is possible. This is what we are doing, for instance, with our programs on agriculture, our rural development and vocational training. We are also assisting civil society initiatives in the entities. We support all of the initiatives that can help re-establish confidence between the sides. Such as people to people contacts, dialog processes and academic exchanges. All our actions between the two regions are fully coordinated and approved by the government of Georgia and in full line with the Georgian engagement policy”.<sup>12</sup>

In light of the recent Peace Initiative of the Georgian State Ministry of Reconciliation, we are now looking at the possibility of providing further support. For instance, there is a clear interest from the breakaway regions to increase trade with the rest of Georgia, but also with the rest of the region. This would represent a major improvement for the life of local communities, and for all people in the wider region. We are also considering a mobility scheme for academics from the breakaway regions, and this could also be facilitated by the Peace Initiative that I just mentioned. Our policy is one of non-recognition but also of engagement with Abkhazia and South Ossetia; exactly in line with the approach of the Georgian government.

“Peace Initiative of the Georgian State Ministry of Reconciliation, we are now looking at the possibility of providing further support”

“The package of proposals adopted today by the Government of Georgia can benefit the citizens living on both sides of the Administrative Boundary Lines by facilitating trade, education and mobility”

Released a statement regarding the new peace initiative of the Georgian government “Step for Better Future”: “The package of proposals adopted today by the Government of Georgia can benefit the citizens living on both sides of the Administrative Boundary Lines by facilitating trade, education and mobility. These proposals are in line with the European Union’s policy of engagement with the breakaway regions of Georgia, which includes several ongoing EU projects. We support initiatives aimed at building bridges across the dividing lines and addressing humanitarian challenges”.

- Clare Moody, a Member of the European Parliament: The S&D Group strongly supports the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Georgia, while the resolution of this conflict is crucial to enhancing security and stability across Europe. We must demonstrate our solidarity with the citizens of the occupied regions and support our Georgian colleagues’ peace initiative – “A Step to a Better Future”. I hope that despite 10 years of occupation, we can help to achieve better relations between those kept apart by the fences of the occupied regions and the rest of Georgia.<sup>13</sup>

- Victor Boștinaru, a Member of the European Parliament: in these ten difficult years, Georgia has managed to make incredible progress along its European integration path and, in particular, to visa liberalisation and the Association Agreement. This is the best sign that Russia did not manage to take Georgia and the Georgian people away from their dreams and will not manage to succeed with Ukraine. Ten years after, Georgia is a much stronger and more developed country, a model for the East European partners of our Union, and an example also in the way it deals with the occupied territories – especially with the initiative aimed at peace and reconciliation by the Georgian Government.<sup>14</sup>

- Anna Elżbieta Fotyga, a Member of the European Parliament: We stand by Georgia. We support the country's European and transatlantic vocation, peace initiatives and the request for a sanctions list condemning and punishing the targeted killings of Russian citizens, in particular Otkhozoria and Tatunashvili. We also praise the EUMM role in Georgia. During two SEDE missions to Georgia we were also able to monitor territories adjacent to South Ossetia and Abkhazia, and we are very much concerned about the situation of people living there.<sup>15</sup>

- Heidi Hautala, a Member of the European Parliament: What you see is that people living in these ‘breakaway’ or ‘occupied’ regions they are denied their basic human rights. They have no chance to express their will and their wishes freely, they have no right to education in their native language and I think we have to praise the peace initiative that Georgia has undertaken – “A Step to a Better Future” whereby they invite the people living in these occupied areas to enjoy certain human rights like health, education and so on.<sup>16</sup>
